STEVE MAXSON APPOINTED DIRECTOR OF BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT – EXTRUSION

Robert Deitrick, vice president of global sales for Graham Engineering Corporation, has promoted Steve Maxson to director of business development – extrusion. Maxson previously led the company’s medical segment.

In this expanded role, he and his team are responsible for the continuity and growth of sales and business development of the company’s American Kuhne brand.

“Steve brings more than 15 years of experience in extrusion technology, product development, and sales,” said Deitrick. “In this expanded role, he and his team will drive growth and innovation into multiple market segments in addition to medical.”
